OFFICE OF BISHOP

DIOCESE OF RAPID CITY

Collection dates: July 11-12, 2015

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ,

The Church in Africa is the fastest-growing Catholic community in the world. Many people in Africa face a daily reality of food insecurity, water shortage, unemployment, lack of medical care, and illiteracy. At the same time, Catholicism is flourishing amid these harsh circumstances. The Solidarity Fund for the Church in Africa supports the future of the Church by funding projects that nourish the people of Africa in both body and spirit.

Children growing up in Burkina Faso suffer from an environment marked by poverty and one of the lowest literacy rates in the world. A grant from the Solidarity Fund for the Church in Africa will give them new resources and a chance at a better education. In the Mouhoun region, located in the northwest part of the country, the grant will fund 13 computers, computer programs, and printers for teachers in the Diocese of Dedougou. Seventy-nine teachers will participate in a three-day training course, which will be funded by both the grant and local contributions. The teachers will receive resources and skills that will improve the children's learning conditions and promote the transfer of knowledge. Thanks to donations from parishioners like you, these children will receive a stronger education and hope for a better future.

With your help, the Church in Africa can continue to play an active role in the evangelization of the world. Projects like this one care for the needs of the African people. This allows Africans to continue giving the world their vibrant expression of faith. Please give generously to the Solidarity Fund for the Church in Africa.

Sincerely in the love of Christ,

+ Robert D. Sruss Most Rev. Robert D. Gruss

Discovering What Pope Francis Really Said in Laudato Si' by Cardinal Donald Wuerl http://www.adw.org/creation-resources

Any of us who have read a newspaper over the last decade know scientists, environmentalists, and politicians have been concerned about the world's ecological balance. Environmental concerns are both local and world-wide, including the health of our rivers and streams and the impact of climate change. What many people do not know is that along with scientists and environmentalists, popes have been concerned about these issues as well. The great interest in Pope Francis' encyclical, Laudato Si', seems to touch two cords in people. At a time in the year when our gardens are in full bloom and evening breezes are warm but not hot, we appreciate that the title, Laudato Si', which comes from the Canticle of the Sun by his namesake, Saint Francis, is itself a prayer of thanksgiving to God who created the beauty we enjoy. Touching on the themes of human ecology, care for creation, climate change, the throwaway culture and the call to build a culture of solidarity, our Holy Father voices a concern that we are losing the attitude of wonder, contemplation and listening to creation. The encyclical thus provides us the opportunity to examine our lifestyle to see what we can do to live in right relationship with God and with the world around us, including our neighbors and the natural environment. In Chapter One, Pope Francis makes some critical observations about the state of the environment, observing that "we need only take a frank look at the facts to see that our common home is falling into serious disrepair" (Laudato Si', 61). This is the context in which we are called to promote the Gospel of Creation that calls for humanity to respect and care for all of God's creatures, which our Holy Father discusses in Chapters Two and Three. "Everything is connected," the Pope repeatedly emphasizes. "Concern for the environment thus needs to be joined to a sincere love for our fellow human beings and an unwavering commitment to resolving the problems of society" (Laudato Si', 91). Resolving those problems lies not in technology or in consumer goods, he says, but in change in thinking and acting. "There can be no renewal of our relationship with nature without a renewal of humanity itself," he explains (Laudato Si', 118). Key to our Holy Father's message is the concept of "integral ecology" discussed in Chapter Four: "Nature cannot be regarded as something separate from ourselves or as a mere setting in which we live. We are part of nature, included in it and thus in constant interaction with it" (Laudato Si', 139). In working to solve environmental problems and maintain a healthy ecosystem, there is something that each of us can do at every level. In Chapter Five, Pope Francis offers a number of proposals, from the international to the national and local to the personal. Rather than feeling overwhelmed by the enormity of some of our biggest ecological challenges, Pope Francis tells us that we can take some small steps that will help our children and grandchildren enjoy clean air and water. Lifting up for us the example of Saint Therese of Lisieux, the Pope says "An integral ecology is also made up of simple daily gestures which break with the logic of violence, exploitation and selfishness" (Laudato Si', 230). In small ways, we can leave the world a better place than we found it. Our Holy Father is asking that we orient our hearts to others, and renew our commitment to the practice of solidarity and interdependence. One expression of a change of heart is to think prayerfully about how much we may participate in uncontrolled consumerism and how we might waste the resources God has entrusted to us. Pope Francis urges us to turn away from the "throwaway culture," in which not only are the various goods of the earth used and thrown away, but people too are exploited and discarded. For example, he explains that "whenever food is thrown out it is as if were stolen from the table of the poor" (Laudato Si', 50). A change of heart is reflected in resolving to live more simply, in a way that first draws us closer to God and live in greater harmony with the natural world, as urged by Pope Francis in Chapter Six. In seeking to apply the lessons of this teaching to our own lives, it is Christ himself who is our teacher. Christ taught us that we should not selfishly seek earthly treasures, but as children of the one Father. When we share property generously, show special solicitude for the poor and afflicted, and seek to structure our human life in harmony with God's gift and design of creation, we see then kingdom of God beginning to appear in our midst. - See more at: http://cardinalsblog.adw.org/2015/06/caring-for-gods-gift-of-creation/#sthash.DO2rM103.dpuf

"THE CHURCH IN

AFRICA IS ITSELF

CALLED TO PLAY AN

ACTIVE ROLE IN GOD'S

PLAN OF SALVATION."

—Saint John Paul II, Ecclesia in Africa

n the first year of his pontificate, Pope Francis addressed a concern for the family in his Apostolic Exhortation Evangelii Gaudium. He said: "The family is experiencing a profound cultural crisis, as are all communities and social bonds.... The weakening of these bonds is particularly serious because the family is the fundamental cell of society" (no. 66). In an effort to shore up these bonds and contribute to the support and growth of African families, the Solidarity Fund for the Church in Africa supports many projects that benefit family life, women, and children.

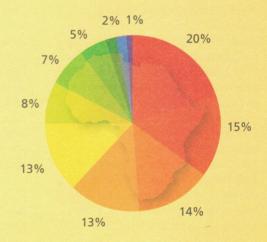

For families in Uganda, many social challenges undermine the development of a strong practice of their Catholic faith and an active participation in society. Some of these problems include more children living on the street, a rising number of single parents, the instability of many marriages, and domestic violence.

In order to help combat these problems and bring the Christian message of hope to families in Uganda, the Solidarity Fund for the Church in Africa funded a series of workshops for parents, children, and relatives. These workshops increased the tools and resources of pastoral workers who care for families, allowing them to effectively reach out and offer strong Christian formation to families and young couples preparing for marriage.

With your help, the Church in Africa can continue to play an active role in the evangelization of the world. Projects like these family workshops care for the spiritual needs of African people. This allows the Church in Africa to give the world many vocations and a vibrant expression of faith. Please give generously to the Solidarity Fund for the Church in Africa.
